FINAL JUDGMENT

At a final hearing in open court on January 11, 2011, the parties appeared representing themselves. On October 13, 2008, plaintiff contracted with defendant to provide "blueprints" suitable to use in seeking a permit and building an addition to her home. She paid $1,200.00 for the plans. So far defendant has not provided the blueprints so that she can get a permit and/or start the work. He has stopped returning calls, emails and/or text messages. She wishes to terminate the contract and seeks refund of all monies paid.

Defendant's testimony was contradictory at best. At times he testified that the final design plan was approved in December 2009, and then at other times he testified that he is still working on the design. He testified that he is still waiting for the plaintiff to give him information so he can draw what she wants, but then states that he has the completed plans in his computer ready to "print." Then he testified that he still has to get the engineer's review and certification before he can complete the blueprints, but the cost has gone up and there are no funds left to get engineering certification. In other words, it is clear that this case has been pending for so long, that the facts have become confused in the defendant's mind. One thing, however, is clear. After more than twenty-six months, the defendant has not completed the work and the plaintiff is not satisfied.

The contract is clear and unambiguous. Defendant was to provide "all documents required for a building permit" including but not limited to "scale drawings of floor plans and elevations... structural information . . . electrical . . . mechanical . . . framing and roof plans. . ." for a "stipulated sum" with "revision until satisfied." It is undisputed that after more than two years, defendant has not provided the final design to plaintiff, nor does she have the documents necessary to obtain a permit to start her home addition. She does not wish to wait any longer and now seeks a full refund. The court finds that she has carried her burden of proof that defendant has breached the contract and it is ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that plaintiff shall recover from defendant $1,200.00 plus court costs of $235.00 all of which shall accrue interest at the rate of 6% per annum for which let execution issue.

DONE AND ORDERED this 11th day of January 2011 in chambers, Pensacola, Escambia County, Florida.
